Dear Majority Leader McConnell, Minority Leader Schumer, Speaker Pelosi, and Minority Leader McCarthy:

Policymakers are considering a legislative spending package aimed at addressing the impact of the coronavirus (COVID-19) on public health and the economy. Any comprehensive response to the coronavirus should include emergency assistance funding to help prevent housing instability and homelessness as a result of the outbreak. An emergency assistance fund would provide both short-term financial assistance and stability services to help households with the lowest incomes overcome an unforeseen economic shock that threatens their housing stability.

Most families living in poverty who rent are spending at least half of their incomes on housing, leaving virtually no margin for an unexpected expense. Temporary declines of income and unreimbursed medical bills can quickly send them down the spiral of housing instability, eviction, and even homelessness. With the coronavirus outbreak, many low-income, hourly wage workers may see reduced wages because they have fallen ill, they must care for a family member, or they are unable to work the hours they need. Research is clear that providing short-term crisis assistance to keep individuals and families stably housed is much cheaper to the taxpayer than incurring the myriad of long-term costs associated with housing instability, eviction, and homelessness.

To help ensure housing stability during the coronavirus outbreak, Congress should create a permanent emergency assistance fund, much like the one proposed by Senators Michael Bennet (D-CO), Rob Portman (R-OH), Sherrod Brown (D-OH), and Todd Young (R-IN) in the bipartisan Eviction Crisis Act, albeit somewhat modified to meet the immediate needs of the current outbreak. Congress could also consider providing resources for the Homelessness Prevention and Rapid Rehousing Program (HPRP), which was successfully used after the 2008 financial crisis and served as a model for the emergency assistance fund featured in the Eviction Crisis Act. Emergency assistance programs have a strong track record of success in places across the country and are among the most effective policy tools available to the federal government to stabilize people in times of crisis.

We are members of the Steering Committee and Roundtable of the Opportunity Starts at Home campaign, and we stand ready to work with you to ensure that the nation's coronavirus response includes this vital component.
